LOS ANGELES (PRWEB) June 18, 2022 -- Angela Reddock-Wright, a former employment and labor law litigating attorney, turned mediator, arbitrator, and workplace and Title IX investigator, announces the release of her first book: Workplace Transformed: 7 Crucial Lessons from the Global Pandemic- Moving Beyond COVID-19 and Embracing the New Future of Work, that is available on sale worldwide. The new book sheds light on the massive changes in the workplace caused by the global health crisis and provides specific, well-thought-out, and practical solutions critical to organizational success.

The immense impact of Covid-19 is undeniable. At a time when many workers are still struggling to adjust to the “new normal” and businesses are contemplating the future of work and new ways to move forward, Reddock-Wright’s innovative ideas, strategies and insights serve as a valuable guide and a source of inspiration for employers and employees alike – at the height of the pandemic and beyond.

“As someone with over 25 years of experience helping employers and employees create thriving workplaces, I am convinced that now is a great time to unveil the curtain on some of the major challenges confronting individuals, businesses, and organizations in the aftermath of Covid-19,” says Angela Reddock-Wright. “While dealing with unprecedented setbacks that are still wreaking havoc in today’s workplace, we can focus on the positive and transform problems into opportunities, challenges into lessons learned, and better prepare for the future. That’s what this book is all about.”

Workplace Transformed reveals Reddock-Wright’s 4Es and 3Ds – her unique formula for success in the wake of the prolonged pandemic. From Elevating human resources, Engaging employees, supporting Essential workers, responding to Employee protests and activism (4Es), to unveiling alternatives to the Daily commute, developing Disaster preparedness plans, and Discerning legal challenges (3Ds), the book outlines a step-by-step plan to create cohesive, productive, and successful organizations that deeply appreciate their employees and bring more value to their clients and customers.

“I wrote this book because I wanted to encourage readers to reflect on what this pandemic has meant to us and those close to us and think about how it has influenced the workplace – all across the United States and around the world,” says Angela Reddock-Wright. “Rather than treating the global disaster as a mere blip in time, let’s think of it as a unique opportunity for us all to take a collective breath and determine what we want our present and future to look like, especially when it comes to the world of work.”

Mrs. Reddock-Wright, who is also a founding and managing partner of The Reddock Law Group, and a neutral
